* On Aug. 4, 2012, in London, Oscar Pistorius of South Africa became the first amputee to compete at the Olympic Games. He finished second out of five runners in the opening heat and went on to the semifinals, where he finished eighth out of eight runners.

* On Aug. 5, 1951, 38-year-old Canadian daredevil William "Red" Hill Jr. attempted to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel made of 13 rubber innertubes, canvas webbing and fish netting that he dubbed "the Thing." It broke apart under the high water pressure two hours after he set out, but his badly injured body was not recovered until the next morning.

* On Aug. 6, 1975, The New York Times printed a front-page obituary for Agatha Christie's Belgian sleuth Hercule Poirot -- quite the honor for a fictional character! Christie had announced her decision to dispose of him in her next book; indeed, as the Times noted, "The news of his death, given by Dame Agatha, was not unexpected. Word that he was near death reached here last May."

CHARMING

Two affluent women were conversing on the porch of a large white-pillared mansion. The first woman, said "When my first child was born, my husband built this beautiful mansion for me."

The second lady commented, "Well,... isn't that nice??"

The first woman continued, "When my second child was born, my husband bought me a new car."

Again, the other lady commented, "Well,... isn't that nice??"

The first woman boasted, "Then, when my third child was born, my husband bought me a diamond bracelet."

Yet again, the second lady commented, "Well,... isn't that nice??"

The first woman then asked her companion, "What did your husband buy for you when you had your first child?"

The second lady replied "My husband sent me to charm school."

"Charm school!", the first woman cried, "Land sakes, child, what on Earth for?"

The second lady responded, "I learned that instead of saying 'who cares', I learned to say, 'Well,... isn't that nice?'"

Magical Mango Sherbet: The 2-Ingredient Dessert That's Cooler Than a Tropical Breeze

When the summer sun cranks up the heat, there's nothing more satisfying than a sweet, icy treat that doesn't require a trip to the tropics -- or a lengthy recipe. Enter the two-ingredient mango sherbet: a creamy, dreamy dessert that's as easy as it is refreshing.

This simple dessert has roots in various cultures. In the Philippines, a similar treat called mango float layers graham crackers, whipped cream and ripe mangoes for a no-bake delight. In Taiwan, mango shaved ice combines fresh mango chunks, condensed milk and mango ice cream atop shaved ice, creating a popular summer dessert.

While these versions offer their own unique twists, the two-ingredient mango sherbet stands out for its simplicity and speed.

Why This Recipe Works

- Minimal Ingredients: Frozen mango chunks and sweetened condensed milk are all you need.
- Quick Prep: Blend the ingredients, freeze and enjoy. No ice cream maker required.
- Versatile Texture: Serve immediately for a soft-serve consistency or freeze longer for a scoopable treat.
- Budget-Friendly: Affordable ingredients make this a cost-effective dessert option when compared to the cost of a tropical vacation.

Ice Cream, Sorbet and Sherbet -- What's the Difference?

It's easy to get frozen desserts confused, but here's the scoop: Sorbet is a refreshing, dairy-free treat made from fruit puree, water and sugar -- pure fruity goodness. Sherbet, on the other hand, sneaks in a little dairy, typically in the form of milk or cream, making it creamier than sorbet but still lighter than ice cream. And ice cream? That's the rich, creamy classic made with milk, cream and often egg yolks, delivering a decadent, indulgent experience. So, when you're craving something fruity and light, reach for sorbet. If you want something a little creamier, sherbet's your go-to. And for full-on indulgence, nothing beats a scoop of ice cream!

MAGICAL MANGO SHERBET

Yield: 6-8 servings

Total Time: 3 hours 5 minutes

4-5 cups frozen mango chunks

1 (14 ounce) can sweetened condensed milk

Combine the frozen mango chunks and sweetened condensed milk in a blender or food processor. Blend until smooth and creamy. For soft-serve texture, serve immediately. For a firmer consistency, transfer to a freezer-safe container and freeze for 3-4 hours. Scoop and enjoy!

This recipe is totally adaptable; you can experiment with other fruits like peaches or pineapples for a different flavor profile.

But wait, there's more! You can easily customize this simple mango sorbet by adding just a few extra ingredients. Toss in a cup of berries, and you've got a delightful mango berry sherbet. Craving something refreshing? Add a handful of fresh mint leaves for a cool, aromatic twist. Want a citrusy kick? A splash of lime juice and zest will do the trick! And if you're in the mood for something you can hold in your hand, why not turn the mixture into popsicles? The possibilities are endless, and each variation is as easy as the original recipe!

While this dessert is indulgent, it does offer some nutritional benefits:

-- Mangoes: Rich in vitamins A and C, fiber and antioxidants.

-- Sweetened Condensed Milk: Provides calcium and protein.

While this dessert is fat-free, it contains quite a hefty amount of sugar. Enjoy it in moderation.

This mango sherbet is more than just a dessert; it's a mini getaway in a bowl. Its tropical flavor and creamy texture transport you to a sunny beach, all without leaving your kitchen. So, when the heat hits and you're craving something cool, whip up this simple treat and let your taste buds take a vacation.

(c) 2025 King Features Synd., Inc.

Made in just five minutes, it's like a mini vacation for your taste buds!

SENIOR NEWS LINE

VIDEO GAMES FOR SENIORS

A recent annual report by the Entertainment Software Association indicates that over 50 million seniors are playing video games. That's over one-quarter of the total number of people playing video games.

Color me shocked. The reason: I thought I was the only one, or at least one of a very few. Little did I know that so many other seniors are also playing video games -- and that more than half of those are females.

When asked why they play, 77% of seniors responded that they play video games to relax, 51% to have fun and 65% to keep minds sharp. There's social interaction, which helps combat isolation. We can improve memory, problem-solving skills and hand-eye coordination. We can slow cognitive decline, reduce the risk of Alzheimer's disease and improve mental flexibility. In other words, playing video games can be good for us.

How to get started if you don't already play? I started playing video games right after I got my first computer, back in 1994. While I've gone through several computers over the years, I still have some of the original games, and they're now classics. For several years I had a membership that sent me a new game every month as well.

To get started now, if you'd like to trying playing video games, begin with something easy, either for your computer or tablet. You have so much to choose from. There are word games and puzzles. There are classic games where you can play chess against the computer. There are trivia games, community builders (you build an online town) and shooter games where you kill enemies or monsters. You can play by yourself or in groups online.

One place to start is the AARP Games Center (aarp.org/games), where you can play dozens of games for free and even more if you're a member. Have fun!

UNDERSTANDING HOW PSAS AND DRES HELP IDENTIFY CANCER

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 53-year-old healthy male, and I always request to check my PSA levels each year. My 57-year-old brother's new doctor denied his request for a routine PSA check on their initial visit. She said that the test now produces more false positives as well as unnecessary procedures and surgeries, so she said "no" and wouldn't order it. Are primary care physicians discouraging the PSA test for older men now? I don't get any push back when I request to check it. Also, I heard the digital rectal exam (DRE) isn't as valid anymore for screening.

His new doctor also did not do a DRE. I'm curious to know your thoughts on the current DRE and PSA screening guidelines for primary care physicians. -- C.C.

ANSWER: The prostate-specific antigen (PSA) test is a screening blood test for cancer, and the recommendation for its use has gone back and forth over decades since it's been introduced. Since screening and prevention are my areas of expertise, I have followed the literature on the use of PSAs and other screening tests very closely. In my opinion, your brother's doctor was wrong to refuse to order the test. She was right that it does produce false positives, which could potentially lead to unnecessary surgeries; however, there are good ways to reduce unnecessary treatment while still ordering the test, which can save lives. Most prostate cancer is so slow-growing that it is likely never to bother a man until he dies from something else. So, we don't want to operate on these relatively indolent cancers because there's a possibility of a serious side effect from surgery, such as urinary incontinence or erectile dysfunction (neither of which any man wants). Before operating, careful testing is done on the prostate cancer, including imaging (ideally by an MRI scan), a biopsy with pathological examination, and often genetic testing of the tumor. Along with the PSA results, we can separate prostate cancer into categories of very low risk and low risk versus intermediate and high risk. Once we have the diagnosis, we can make good recommendations so that we can identify the rare high-risk cancers while not unnecessarily treating the low-risk cancers. Without screenings, we can't keep rare, small and aggressive tumors from spreading until it's too late. Now I have to tell you that 57 isn't so much "older" than 53, at least from the perspective of prostate cancer screening. The most important time for prostate cancer screening is ages 50-70. There are some men who benefit from starting screening at a younger age (those with a family history, Black men, and men with certain genetic risks), and there are some who benefit from starting screening when they're older than 70. The DRE does not add much to the results of the blood test. Approximately 1% of men will get prostate cancer that is diagnosed by the DRE as part of combined screening. Many men will refuse screening if it includes a rectal exam, and it's estimated that 90% of abnormal rectal exams will be false positives. On the other hand, I've had instances where quite a few men don't feel like they have been adequately screened unless they get the DRE. I have a discussion with every man about PSA testing, and I recommend it for most men in this age group. But I only rarely have had a man say that he doesn't want it once he understands that we won't recommend surgery unless the combination of all the studies show this is a high-risk situation.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu. (c) 2025 North America Synd., Inc. All Rights Reserved
